1. Add the missing speech punctuation to this passage.

Excuse me, said the man. Can you tell me what the time is?

I think it's about 8 o'clock, replied Graham. I haven't got my watch on but I remember seeing the time on the town hall clock a few minutes ago.

The town hall! said the man. That's just what I'm looking for. Can you point me in the right direction?

Certainly, said Graham. You just go down there past the bank, turn left, go straight on and the town hall will be on your right hand side.

Brilliant, said the man, Thanks for your help.

That's okay, said Graham.

Resource 3A – Model Text

Determined, Anansi spun her web, building a silky, delicate ladder towards the sky. As strong gusts of wind blew, wisps of web were pulled from the ladder, weakening it in parts. The tiny but mighty spider felt her skin warm as she climbed higher towards the scorching sun and the thick blanket of clouds with cotton like edges. At last, she reached her destination and before her lay a towering, magnificent castle covered in gleaming marble.

Anansi could not reach the door handle, so the clever spider slid skillfully under the great castle door. Without a second thought, Anansi scuttled across the ocean blue floor, creeping towards the wonderful chest of stories. As she edged closer, a thunder like voice boomed, sending vibrations through her eight spindly legs.

“Why have you come to my cloud chamber?” roared Nyame as he stretched his blood thirsty finger towards Anansi in disgust.

“I’ve... I’ve come for your bag of stories,” murmured Anansi as she backed away from the sky god, looking around to find her closest escape route.

With a furrowed brow, Nyame barked “What? How dare you ask to take my most prized possession?” The giant stood from his throne and strode towards the miniature creature.

“I need them for the people on earth,” explained brave Anansi as she scurried up the wooden chest.

“I am sure you would like my stories little spider, but how are you going to get them?” chuckled Nyame as his enormous shadow plunged Anansi into darkness.

The cunning spider raised its bushy eyebrow and confidently remarked, “You tell me, oh gracious sky god. I’m brave and clever, tell me what I need to do.”

Resource 3B – Planning – Support

The planning format will help you to plan the narrative paragraphs before and after the dialogue and the dialogue in between.

You can plan directly onto this planning grid or write the plan out in your book.

*You may need more space for planning the dialogue if Anansi and Nyame say more to each other.

Below is an example of how to plan the speech using this format.

→Anansi	Speech	It is I, Anansi the cleverest spider.	Outcome: "It is I, Anansi the cleverest spider," announced Anansi bravely as she crawled under the heavy, wooden castle door into Nyame's enormous palace.
